Hits Nation as Most Lawless

Bourquin Declares U. S. Has Worst Enforcement of Statutes

TRENTON (AP)—Federal Judge George M. Bourquin of Butte, Mont., sitting here to help clear the crowded docket, filed an opinion today in which he characterized the United States as the most lawless nation in the world with the most badly-enforced laws and the poorest administration of justice. The criticisms were penned in finding eight men guilty of liquor law violations.

The public's attitude toward the police and prohibition agents, he added, is a contributory factor to this condition.

"If America is the most criminal country on the earth—and it is—if the laws are most poorly enforced, justice most weakly administered—and they are—the aforesaid reprehensible treatment of officers of the law is a large contributing cause," he said.

"Their own merits," he went on, speaking of dry agents, "the administration of justice and the best interests of society demand that fair treatment for officers of the law which the President asked.

"Prohibition and other federal agents are national police and the police are all that stand between organized society and anarchy," he said earlier.

Eight Political Leaders Are Called in Probe of Relief Uses

NEW YORK (U. P.)—Samuel Seabury, counsel for the Holstadter legislative committee, began today its investigation into charges that unemployment relief funds were distributed for political purposes.

He summoned eight Tammany and Bronx district leaders, some of them job holders in the city administration,

Federal Judge Charles F. Lynch and Deputy Clerk William B. Reilly, two of Judge Runyon's closest friends, visited him weekly during the last year.

Two weeks ago they were surprised to hear him singing and found the piano had been moved to the second floor of the house so Judge Runyon could play and sing without climbing the stairs.

He had a wide reputation as a soloist. The last two times Judge Runyon appeared in Newark Federal Court rooms were Christmas eve and New Year's eve last year. The first was for an informal Christmas party of court attaches in Judge Fake's chambers when remembrances were exchanged. December 31, Judge Runyon was taken to his home by Deputy C...

He was frequently interrupted by questions from O'Connor or Gerald Knight, an engineer employed by the Commissioner, and insulted by remarks from the audience.

Potter insisted engineering practice demanded lining for the cast iron pipe and that places where outcroppings of shale appeared should be reinforced with concrete. He declared a concrete envelope was necessary to protect the sewer and with 300 feet of concrete and the west portal with 100 feet.

Potter illustrated his argument with stereoptican views. He declared the controversy arose over four points.

These he said were: Whether 1,000 feet of cast iron pipe used should be lined inside with enamel to prevent corrosion and closings; whether concrete lining should be used in shale rock; whether the tunnel should have a concrete envelope, and the necessity of concrete protection at the east and west portals.
