

Jailbreak Plot Fails; 4 Bludgeons Confiscated Trenton Warden Finds Blackjacks Fashioned From Tin Foil

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 2 (AP).—A plot involving two or more prisoners to escape from the county jail by attacking guards with hand-made blackjacks was frustrated by Warden John D'Arcy yesterday, it became known today. Four bludgeons, consisting of tin foil wrapped in cloth, were seized in a general search of the cell blocks.

Two Federal prisoners, being held while awaiting a decision on an appeal, were implicated and placed in another section. They are John Dulak, thirty-five years old, and Joseph Matchok, thirty-four, both of Hackensack. Prior to September they were inmates of Atlanta Penitentiary for sixteen months, serving time for possession and passing of counterfeit money.

One blackjack was found hidden in bed clothing in Dulak's cell. The others had been placed on a ledge above entrances to the individual cells where they would escape detection. In one case the foot of a sock had been utilized to form the weapon. The tin foil was obtained from smoking tobacco wrappers.

Warden D'Arcy and jail guards were aroused by an air of mystery that seemed to pervade the jail. They immediately began a search, particularly on the second floor west wing, where prisoners of all classifications have been permitted to mingle because of overcrowding.

five-gallon cans. The liquid was

The garage, which is listed as being in the rear of the home of Maggio's father, Samuel Maggio, 634 Whittaker Avenue, was used solely as a storehouse. The place was wired for a burglar alarm system and could be entered, police say, through doors from the Maggio home.

The establishments had been under surveillance of Federal agents and city police for some time. Yesterday afternoon, two agents saw a heavily-laden car leave the place. They followed the vehicle to South Broad search brought to light 29 five-gallon

cans of alcohol, the agents arrested

held there so he could not give an alarm. The agents then communicated with Lieutenant Lewis Sigafoos and asked for aid in raiding the place.

Sigafoos, at the head of a detail,
joined the agents and the round-up was made. The authorities reported finding Anthony Maggio and Olinsky in the elder Maggio's home. The six other defendants were arrested at 11 Cummings Avenue. Work of placing the alcohol in cans was going on at the time they entered, police say.
They also report that two trucks
were loaded with filled cans, ready for delivery.

Young Maggio and Olinsky explained their presence in the other Maggio's home by declaring that they had been invited there for dinner.
Both declared that they knew noth-

Sigafoos asserted he arrested Anthony night.

TRENTON BONDSMAN INDICTED IN NEWARK

NEWARK, Jan. 5 (AP).—A Federal Grand Jury returned indictments today against five professional bondsmen operating in the Federal courts of this State. The indictments were received by Federal Judge Guy L. Fake.

The bills were returned against Isidor Kaplan and Herman Schoellhamer of Newark; Abraham Rosenkranz, of Camden; Andrew Sivo, of Trenton, and Benjamin Ray, of Atlantic City.

Five indictments were against Kaplan and Sivo, four against Rosenkranz, three against Schoellhamer and two against Ray.

The indictments, charging perjury, allege they swore falsely as to the ownership of property.

Sivo's home is at 834 Chambers Street, this city.

RY AGENT'S ON IS UPHELD

James Trombetta, an agent charged with bribes at places he has been upholding in Philadelphia, was convicted December 8, 1931, by Federal Judge William Clark to six months in jail. He has been free on $5,000 bail pending disposition of the appeal.

An indictment charged that in 1925 Trombetta accepted a bribe of $85 from Frank Romano, of South Broadway, and $200 from Joseph Reiners.

The Court of Appeals asserted the defendant had not shown any substantial evidence "which would mitigate against justice of the sentence."

Five Bondsmen Are Indicted

Professional Operators in Federal Courts Charged with Perjury

Indictments against five professional bondsmen operating in the federal courts in New Jersey were returned today by the November term grand jury. Judge Fake received the indictments with a number of others.

Those indicted are Isidor Kaplan and Herman Schoellhamer, both of Newark; Abraham Rosenkranz of Camden, Andrew Sivo of Trenton and Benjamin Ray of Atlantic City. There are five counts against Kaplan and Sivo, four against Rosenkranz, three against Schoellhamer and two against Ray.

All five are charged with perjury. Rosenkranz and Ray are alleged to have sworn falsely to ownership of property. All five are alleged by the government to have misrepresented the amount of bail bonds they had outstanding. All offenses, the government charges, have occurred within the last two years.

In one instance, Kaplan is alleged to have appeared before United States Commissioner Friedmann in Newark August 11, 1928, to furnish $1,000 bail for a defendant known as Lee Souey. At the time Kaplan is alleged to have sworn that his outstanding bonds totaled only $16,000. Government investigation, it was declared, showed that he had outstanding $65,500 in bonds in Federal Court and $171,000 in the state courts.

Several weeks ago United States District Attorney Phillip Forman promised to clean up the business of professional bondsmen operating in the federal courts. In November, 1930, Forman sent copies of new rules adopted by the courts to the various United States commissioners. The rules, he said, were aimed to halt "racketeering" among bondsmen.
