

CITY SET FOR P. O. CORNERSTONE LAYING

March of Progress in Newark Marked by Growth of Federal Quarters

Farley to Officiate At Federal Building

Troops Will Escort Officials at Exercises in Franklin Street Tomorrow

ORDER OF MARCH

Here is the order of march of the procession in the cornerstone laying exercises at the new postoffice and federal building here tomorrow:

10:30 A. M.—Party of Postmaster General James A. Farley, Governor A. Harry Moore and Mayor Frank Hague will meet Essex Troop escort and local officials in front of the Newark Public Library at Broad and Bridge streets.

Line of march will be south on Broad street to Franklin street to new postoffice building.

12:30 P. M.—After the ceremonies, Farley and more than 300 invited guests will drive in a procession out of Franklin street, north on Broad street to Park place to the Robert Treat Hotel for a luncheon.

With flags flying, a procession and ceremonies to be attended by high government civic and business figures Newark tomorrow will celebrate the laying of the cornerstone of its imposing $6,150,000 new postoffice and federal building.

A citizens' general committee in charge of the affair has completed all plans. Troops, federal government, State and city officials, church dignitaries and members of civic and fraternal organizations will take part in the exercises.

Articles to Go In Cornerstone

Posterity will get a pretty good idea of happenings of the present day from papers, records and other articles to be sealed in the cornerstone of the new Postoffice and Federal building at exercises Saturday.

Here are the articles to be placed in a locked box within the stone:

Latest issues of local newspapers and also a copy of the centennial edition of the Newark Star-Eagle; a photo of the old Postoffice building; two photos of the present building; a sketch of the new building; a copy of the invitation; a copy of the program; copies of speeches by Postmaster General Farley, Governor Moore and Mayor Ellenstein.

Also, minted 1934 coins of one, five, ten, twenty-five and fifty cents and a $1 bill and the 1934 issue of the World Almanac.

STRIKES DELAY U. S. BUILDING

New federal building as it stands today, ready for impressive ceremonies tomorrow. In the foreground may be seen the cornerstone which will be formally dedicated by Postmaster General Farley. Space left for the stone in massive base of the building is clearly visible. This building, which will be ready for occupancy in the fall, is the third required to house increasing government business in Newark.
