Resignation By Stanziale

Quits as Chief Aide to U.S. Attorney, but Denies Friction

Resignation of Charles A. Stanziale as chief assistant United States attorney was announced last night in the midst of reports of increasing friction between the chief and his immediate superior, United States Attorney Rossbach. The resignation will take effect March 15.

Stanziale said today that he had been considering resignation from federal service "for a long time." He denied emphatically that the move was the result of differences with Rossbach. He declined to say when his resignation had been submitted, adding that he had discussed the matter with Rossbach and other members of his staff.

Stanziale also said he doesn't know anything about reports that he plans to join the law firm of Lord & Hughes. He said he will return to the criminal practice he left 11 years ago to join the federal attorney's staff.

Thorn Lord Heads Firm

United States Attorney Thorn Lord and Assistant Attorney Richard J. Hughes left federal service to open law offices in Newark and Trenton. They were joined later by Assistant Attorney Vincent E. Hull, who also had difficulties with Rossbach.

as a prosecutor," Stanziale said, "but I had considerable criminal experience before taking up the prosecution end ,and I think I'll pick up the knack of defense in a short time."

Speculation at the Federal Building was that Assistant United States Attorney Amada will take over the post of chief assistant. Amada is known to be close to Rossbach, who has the authority to appoint his own chief.

Many Reports of Differences

The recent history of Stanziale at the Federal Building has been one of recurring reports of resignation. The first break between Stanziale and Rossbach came prior to the openin gof the check-kiting trial of Attorney General Van Riper in 1945. It was said at that time that Stanziale and Rossbach differed over summoning an Essex County Democratic leader as a government witness.

The most recent rumors of dissension have centered about the post-trial investigation of the Joseph S. Fay income tax evasion case. At the grand jury's request, Stanziale took the jury before Senior Federal Judge Fake early this month. It was on that occasion that some jurors expressed dissatisfaction with Rossbach's handling of the Fay case. The jury later dropped its investigation.

Stanziale's impending departure was marked yesterday by repartee with Rossbach in Federal Judge Meaney's court.

Anthony A. Calandra, defense counsel, asked postponement of a case in which he is defense counsel. Stanziale objected. Calandra said the objection seemed "unfair." After Meaney calmed both down (and granted the postponement), Stanziale muttered:

"Every time you try a case and get a conviction, you're unfair!"

Wins "Acquittal, Too"

Interjected Rossbach: "That hasn't been often lately."

"What" asked Meaney.

"To get a conviction," said Rossbach.

"Ah, that is the unkindest cut of all," cried the judge. "What's your average recently, Mr. Stanziale?"

"One hundred per cent, your honor," the office's most successful prosecutor retorted. Then, turning to Rossbach, he added:

"I'm getting acquittals now, too!"

Stanzile was appointed assistant United States attorney in February, 1937. He was mentioned as a successor to Lord. The post, however, went to Rossbach.

Justice M' Cooey Wins Dismissal of Shore Charge

A Spring Lake police complaint charging New York Supreme Court Justice John H. McCooey with violation of the New Jersey disorderly persons act was dismissed today in a decision by the New Jersey Supreme Court on the grounds that the complaint was "fatally defective."

The opinion, delivered by Justice Howard Eastwood, stated that the complaint filed against McCooey on July 30, 1946, was defective in that it did not specify particulars as to the time, place, and nature of the alleged offense and found that the arguments and authority in the brief of S. Marvin Megill, recorder of the borough of Spring Lake, were "without merit."

The complaint, made by Spring Lake police chief Russell Hurden, before Megill, charged that;

"On July 30, 1946, John H. McCooey, being under influence of intoxicating liquor, did loiter in the rooms and corridors of the Monmouth Hotel, Spring Lake, Monmouth County, a public place, and on private property not his own, and did then and there indulge in and utter loud and offensive and indecent language, and that the said John McCooey, by reason of facts herein stated was then and there a disorderly person within the meaning of RS2: 202-8."

McCooey, in the amplication for the writ of dismissal, stated that the complaint was defective because it was "vague and uncertain and duplicitous." With this contention, the decision of Justice Eastwood agreed, and the complaint and warrant were sit aside.

McCooey, who resides at 315 Garfield Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., was freed under $100 bail after his arrest. Three police court hearings on the charges were postponed, two because of the ill health of McCooey and the third because of the application to the supreme court for dismissal of the complaint.

Speculation Rife On Perskie's Post

Driscoll Hasn't Indicated He Will Reappoint Supreme Court Justice

Trenton Bureau.

TRENTON — Whether Supreme Court Justice Perskie will be reappointed when his term expires late next month has become a major matter of speculation among members of the court and the bar.

Sources close to Governor Driscoll indicate that he has not made up his mind and may not decide until the day the nomination goes to the Senate. Perskie has been active in his own behalf and probably will have at least the apparent support of Senator Farley of Atlantic.

State House report is that Driscoll has been considering the appointment of Federal District Court Judge Phillip Forman of Trenton or possibly Herbert J. Hannoch, Newark lawyer.

Perskie will round out 15 years on the court March 28. He received his first appointment from Governor Moore and was reappointed by Moore in 1940.

At that time he also had trouble in being renamed. Former Senator Taggart of Atlantic was not inclined to go along but Moore finally prevailed upon him to support the reappointment.
